Book Depository Will Be Museum

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — The Texas School Book Depository, from which were fired shots that struck President Kennedy in 1963, will be turned into a museum housing more than 150,000 items associated with the slain president, its new owner said Monday.

Aubrey Mayhew, of Nashville, Tenn., an executive with a California plastic company, pledged he would make the building, which he bought at auction for $650,000 last year, into "the foremost tourist attraction in the world."
